As Lacan advises, we have to "distinguish love as an imaginary passion from the active gift which it constitutes on the symbolic plane" (Seminar I, p.276, my italics). That said, a condition of love is that these symbolic relations be subverted. Love entails what Lacan calls a "veritable subduction of the symbolic" (Seminar I, p.142). We should hear in this term 'subduction' its geological resonance – the pushing of one tectonic plate under another in the force their collision.

In this lively and wide-ranging exploration of love throughout the ages, Bruce Fink argues that it can. Taking within his compass a vast array of traditions from Antiquity to the courtly love poets, Christian love, and Romanticism, and providing an in-depth examination of Freud and Lacan on love and libido, Fink unpacks Lacan's paradoxical claim that love is giving what you don't have.
